

Air Transat Environmental Policy

The prosperity of the travel and tourism industry is built on a healthy planet and sustainable communities. Air Transat recognizes and accepts its responsibility to contribute to this goal and has set itself the strategic objective of being an industry leader in environmental performance. For everything related to its operations, activities, head office, maintenance facilities and the disposal of aircraft at the end of their useful life, Air Transat commits to the following:

1. Comply with all municipal, provincial, federal, international and other legal requirements applicable to Air Transat and, to the extent possible, implement practices going beyond these requirements.
2. Protect the environment and prevent pollution by reducing the impacts generated by its activities, buildings and supply chains due to better environmental management practices, such as improving the energy level efficiency of the organization and increasing the waste management.
3. Continuously improve the environmental management system, as well as environmental performance, by establishing and updating its objectives and by training and engaging its employees and stakeholders whose activities have significant impacts on the environment.
4. Collaborate with all key stakeholders concerned (employees, suppliers, communities and governments) with respect to initiatives and issues affecting the environment, sustainable development and corporate social responsibility.
